1 INTRODUCTION

2 The purpose of this action is to enjoin and seek damages for computer fraud and abuse
3 stemming from the illegal, unauthorized, and malicious lock-out of Plaintiff Ms. Hanieh Sigari
4 from her multi-million dollar company by her soon-to-be ex-husband, Defendant Mr. Dariusz
5 Banasik.

6 Qyral, LLC is a wellness company with over 100,000 customers and 1,300 wellness consultants
7 who travel the country promoting Qyral products to their networks, and elsewhere. That is 1,300
8 people, plus Plaintiff Ms. Sigari, who rely on Qyral for their livelihoods. Qyral is Ms. Sigari's
9 company, not Defendant's— she is the CEO, sole manager, and sole member of the LLC. Through 10 Defendant's illegal actions on 3/22/2024, he has irreparably harmed the company and its many 11 employees and consultants, as well as Plaintiffs.

12 To summarize the events of Friday, March 22, 2024, Defendant illegally and without proper
13 authority: (1) took control of and locked Plaintiff out of all of Qyral's I.T. infrastructure, 14 including its Google Administrator panel, domain name, Shopify account, phone numbers, email
15 accounts, and all other electronic assets; (2) shut off Plaintiff's mobile phone number, thereby 16 preventing her from making or receiving calls or text messages, and preventing her from resetting 17 her passwords and interacting with various service providers; (3) sent out a false, defamatory 18 "announcement" stating that Plaintiff had been removed from her position with Qyral for 19 purported breaches of fiduciary duty; (4) purported to fire a number of company employees and 20 contractors; (5) announced that the Facebook group (still controlled by Plaintiff) was no longer 21 authoritative and should be considered compromised; (6) started transferring an as-yet unknown 22 amount of money out of the business accounts; and (7) changed the account used for the 23 company's business deposits to one under his control.

24 Defendant's scheme was intended to sow distrust and discord throughout Qyral, thereby 25 irreparably damaging it and its brand, and destroying the personal reputation of Plaintiff, while 26 also enriching Defendant. All of this was in violation of the law, specifically the Computer Fraud
27 and Abuse Act, which is a Federal criminal statute that prohibits exactly Defendant's conduct.
28 His conduct also violated the Automatic Temporary Restraining Orders that are on the Summons

1 that Defendant filed in a recent divorce case that is pending in Santa Clara County, and numerous 2 other provisions of State law in the Penal Code.

3 This action and this application follow Plaintiff's demand letter of March 23, 2024 (Exhibit 1
4 to the Verified Complaint) seeking the restoration of the status quo, to which there has been no
5 response. Notice has not been given because of the substantial risk of dissipation of the company's 6 funds, as Defendant already attempted to transfer $40,000.00 and may have succeeded in 7 transferring other substantial funds— the change in Stripe payment accounts essentially guarantees
8 that the stream of revenue from purchases by customers will be siphoned into Defendant's account 9 immediately.

10 FACTS

11 Qyral, LLC is a wellness company started in 2019 by Plaintiff. Although the company was 12 started during the parties' marriage to each other, the company has belonged solely to Plaintiff 13 and been under her management and control since the beginning. Regardless of any 14 characterization issues implicating the law of community property or otherwise, even if the 15 company were community property, Defendant would have had no right to do what he did.

16 Qyral has approximately 1,300 wellness consultants, who travel the country promoting its 17 products and services to over 100,000 customers. Plaintiff was on a business trip to Utah
18 promoting the company to various online influencers when Defendant executed his plan to cut her 19 off, which drastically impaired Plaintiff's ability to respond to his illegal, wrongful acts because 20 Plaintiff did not have access to her office, computer, or employees.

21 Qyral relies strongly on Plaintiff's personal brand. Plaintiff is the "Martha Stewart" or 22 "Oprah" of Qyral, and her personal efforts are responsible for the company's success, not any 23 (minimal) contributions from Defendant. This had been the situation throughout the company's 24 history of five years, during which it experienced massive growth due to Plaintiff's successful
25 promotion of its products. In any case, the fact that Qyral is heavily reliant on Plaintiff's personal 26 brand magnifies the wrongdoing of Defendant exponentially. Without Plaintiff, and without 27 Plaintiff having access to her I.T. infrastructure and communications, the company will fail.

28 Essentially, the company has the following workflow:

19 The first indication that something was wrong was at 1:43 p.m. on Friday the 22nd. At that 20 time, the Chief Operating Officer of the company, who was attending the Utah business trip with 21 Plaintiff, commented that her Slack access had just been suddenly cut off. Seeing the COO's 22 screen, which confirmed this, Plaintiff checked her own Slack account and saw that her Slack 23 access had also been suddenly cut off. It turns out that everyone in the company's leadership had 24 been kicked out of Slack suddenly and with no warning. Following the removal from Slack, 25 Plaintiff started getting password reset notifications from various service providers, until two 26 minutes later at 1:45 p.m., when her Google Administrator access was removed. Plaintiff's phone 27 then went into "SOS" mode and she could not place or receive calls or text messages. Then at 28 2:04 p.m., after Defendant had cut off Plaintiff's email and phone and when she had no way to

1 communicate, Defendant sent his first email (Exhibit 2 to the Verified Complaint) to Qyral
2 employees and consultants, stating the Plaintiff had been removed from her company for breaches
3 of fiduciary duty. Shortly after this, Defendant sent a mass email to Plaintiff's family accusing her
4 of having an affair and providing contact information for the alleged romantic partner. At this 5 point (Friday shortly after 2 p.m.), Plaintiff discovered that her Chase banking username and 6 password had been reset and that Defendant was starting to transfer funds out of the Chase
7 operating account by wire (Plaintiff saw one transfer of $40,000.00 in that brief window) into a 8 separate account under his control. The Chase business account is usually at $240,000.00 and 9 Plaintiff saw that it was then under $90,000.00 which is abnormal. Plaintiff was able to call Chase
10 and initiate a temporary freeze on the business accounts, however, she also learned from Chase 11 that she had been locked out of her personal accounts as well. Plaintiff learned from the other 12 attendees of the business trip to Utah that people were trying to contact her and could not,
13 because Defendant cut off her phone line. Plaintiff tried to reset her Domain Name Service entries 14 on GoDaddy in order to temporarily shut off the company email, but she could not provide the 15 2-factor authentication codes because the authentication was under her just-disconnected phone
16 number. The rest of the afternoon of the 22nd was filled with Plaintiff trying to find litigation
17 counsel to handle this matter on an emergency basis. Then at 10:38 p.m., Defendant sent a 18 second mass email (Exhibit 3 to the Verified Complaint), in which he claimed, falsely, that the 19 Facebook account (still controlled by Plaintiff) was compromised and no longer authoritative.
20 Finally, Defendant unlawfully and without proper authority changed the bank account where 21 payments go from the Chase operating account to a different account, presumably under his 22 control. A copy of screenshot with the Stripe account change notification is provided as (Exhibit 4 23 to the Verified Complaint).

24 Plaintiff was harmed by being cut off from access to her own company, being unable to 25 communicate with customers, and having potentially millions of dollars siphoned off into accounts 26 under Defendant's control.

27 Plaintiff's counsel wrote a detailed demand letter to Defendant in an effort to restore 28 Plaintiff's control of her company. There has been no response as of this filing. This action followed on an emergency basis, and the pleadings will be amended according to law with additional facts and legal authority as the situation develops.

KEY LAW

The purpose of a temporary restraining order is to preserve the status quo and prevent irreparable harm until a hearing may be held on the propriety of a preliminary injunction. Reno Air Racing Assoc., Inc. v. McCord, 452 F.3d 1126, 1131 (9th Cir. 2006).

The standard for a TRO is identical to the standard for a preliminary injunction. See Stuhlbarg Int'l Sales Co. v. John D. Brush & Co., 240 F.3d 832, 839 n.7 (9th Cir. 2001). To obtain either a TRO or a preliminary injunction, the moving party must show: (1) a likelihood of success on the merits; (2) a likelihood of irreparable harm to the moving party in the absence of preliminary relief; (3) that the balance of equities tips in favor of the moving party; and (4) that an injunction is in the public interest. Winter v. Nat. Res. Def. Council, Inc., 555 U.S. 7, 20, (2008); see also Fed. R. Civ. Proc. § 65.

Although a plaintiff seeking a TRO or preliminary injunction must make a showing on each element, the Ninth Circuit employs a “version of the sliding scale” approach where “a stronger showing of one element may offset a weaker showing of another.” All. for the Wild Rockies v. Cottrell, 632 F.3d 1127, 1131-35 (9th Cir. 2011). This is also known as the “serious questions” test, which states “‘serious questions going to the merits’ and a balance of hardships that tips sharply towards the plaintiff can support issuance of a preliminary injunction, so long as the plaintiff also shows that there is a likelihood of irreparable injury and that the injunction is in the public interest.” Id. at 1135 (internal quotation marks omitted).

Generally, a TRO or preliminary injunction is considered “an extraordinary remedy that may only be awarded upon a clear showing that the plaintiff is entitled to such relief.” Winter, 555 U.S. at 22. “A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary and drastic remedy. It should never be awarded as of right[.]” Munaf v. Geren, 553 U.S. 674, 690, 128 S. Ct. 2207 (2008) (citation omitted). The moving party has the burden of persuasion. Hill v. McDonough, 547 U.S. 573, 584, 126 S. Ct. 2096, 165 L. Ed. 2d 44 (2006).

The court may issue a temporary restraining order ex parte without written or oral notice to

1 the adverse party or its attorney only if: (A) specific facts in an affidavit or a verified complaint
2 clearly show that immediate and irreparable injury, loss, or damage will result to the movant
3 before the adverse party can be heard in opposition; and (B) the movant's attorney certifies in 4 writing any efforts made to give notice and the reasons why it should not be required. Fed. R.
5 Civ. P. 65(b)(1). "The stringent restrictions imposed . . . by Rule 65[ ] on the availability of ex 6 parte temporary restraining orders reflect the fact that our entire jurisprudence runs counter to 7 the notion of court action taken before reasonable notice and an opportunity to be heard has been 8 granted both sides of a dispute." Granny Goose Foods, Inc. v. Bhd. of Teamsters, 415 U.S. 423, 9 438-39, 94 S. Ct. 1113, 39 L. Ed. 2d 435 (1974) (footnote omitted). Accordingly, "courts have 10 recognized very few circumstances justifying the issuance of an ex parte TRO." Reno Air Racing Ass'n v. McCord, 452 F.3d 1126, 1131 (9th Cir. 2006). "For example, an ex parte TRO may be 11 appropriate 'where notice to the adverse party is impossible either because the identity of the 12 adverse party is unknown or because a known party cannot be located in time for a hearing.'" Id.
13 (quoting Am. Can Co. v. Mansukhani, 742 F.2d 314, 322 (7th Cir. 1984)). Alternatively, "[i]n 14 cases where notice could have been given to the adverse party, courts have recognized a very 15 narrow band of cases in which ex parte orders are proper because notice to the defendant would 16 render fruitless the further prosecution of the action." Id. (quoting Am. Can Co., 742 F.3d at 17 322).

19 ARGUMENT

20 I. THE VERIFIED COMPLAINT ESTABLISHES THE REQUIRED 21 SHOWING UNDER THE LAW

22 The Verified Complaint establishes criminal violations of law, which Plaintiff only has to prove 23 to a civil standard of proof in this case; the harm to her company already is irreparable and will 24 continue unless the Defendant is restrained; there is severe hardship to Plaintiff if the Temporary 25 Restraining Order is not granted, but minimal hardship to Defendant if the Temporary 26 Restraining Order is granted; and restraining violations of this type is certainly within the public 27 interest. In a case of this type, in which a network-based company is controlled solely through 28 electronic means, the Defendant's illegal conduct is especially damaging, and concerning. He must

1 have been plotting this cutoff for months, apparently in order to punish his soon-to-be ex-wife by 2 damaging her personal brand and defaming her. This is a textbook case for issuance of a
3 Temporary Restraining Order. Even if Defendant were to claim that the company is community 4 property because it was started during marriage (it was), his actions are still illegal, and 5 contemptible, because ex-spouses cannot willfully and maliciously lock each other out of 6 community property— or their personal accounts, as happened here as well.

7 II. IRREPARABLE HARM WILL RESULT IF THE TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER
8 IS NOT GRANTED, EVEN WITHOUT NOTICE

9 Notice was not given because of the demonstrated risk of dissipation of company funds, which 10 Defendant already initiated on at least one occasion. In addition, the changeover to the bank
11 account on Stripe for customer payments means that Defendant could, if notified, move the funds
12 elsewhere. Accordingly, this application is made without notice. The responsible attorney, 13 Andrew G. Watters, Esq., hereby certifies pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 65(b)(1) that notice to 14 Defendant beyond what has already been given in the demand letter would present a substantial 15 risk of exceptionally grave harm to Plaintiff.

16 CONCLUSION

17 A Temporary Restraining Order and Order to Show Cause re Preliminary Injunction should 18 issue forthwith to prevent the continued violations of law and restore Plaintiff to her rightful 19 position with the status quo until the hearing on a preliminary injunction.
